stack-levels — zsh

Why replying to buyers feels salesy

You'd rather be ignored than seen as spam.

step-01.sh

THE REASON

It’s pitching where nobody asked

> Spam lands on someone busy.
A reply lands on someone asking.
Same words. Different room.
So it starts with
where you reply.

step-02.sh

MOVE 01 / 04

Reply only where someone asked

> Look for "any tool for..."
or "how do you handle..."
No question, no reply.
Then read how they said it.

step-03.sh

MOVE 02 / 04

Use their words

> Say their problem back
in the words they used.
They feel heard first.
Then they want the answer.

step-04.sh

MOVE 03 / 04

Answer like a friend

> Tell them what you'd do.
Name other tools that work too.
Honest beats complete.
Your app comes last.

step-05.sh

MOVE 04 / 04

Mention yours last

> One line, at the end.
As one option, not the answer.
If it fits, they'll find you.
If not, you still helped.

You'd rather stay quiet. Don't.

Comment REPLY and I'll DM you the Reply Rules: what to check before you post in any thread.

Comment REPLY →